COL. ROTHWELL TELLS PHILIPPINES EXPERIENCES

Dr. Frank R. Felt was chairman of the day at Wednesday Kiwanis luncheon held in the Ocean Beach school cafeteria at 12:30 p. m.

Col. Rothwell ,retired 5th U. S. Cavalry officer now living in La Jolla was speaker of the day. Col. Rothwell was stationed for two years in the Philippines and told some interesting events happening there in which U. S. troops were concerned at the close of the Spanish-American war.

He told of their fight against cholera, how suddenly soldiers and natives died when it was contracted, then of the discovery that it came from the water they were using. Following this discovery distilled water was sent his detachment and all went well for many weeks, the better health of the men being attributed to the pure water, then accidental discovery was made that their native cook, finding the water kept away the cholera had been bathing in the same tank from which they got their supply. The cook had kept cool as he intended and strange to say the men had not suffered from this misuse of their culinary supply. The fierce attack on Christian soldiers by the Mohammedan natives was also related, with the checking of these murders in an effectual way when the tribe leaders were told and shown that any of their men killed in these attacks would be buried with a pig, thereby concelling their entry in heaven for the murder of a Christian.

ENGAGEMENT REVEALED AT DELIGHTFUL PARTY

Miss Dorothy S. Vaughan last Saturday evening, April 27th, announced her engagement to Forest J. Smith of San Diego at the home of her parents Mr. and Mrs. George N. Vaughan, 1420 Ebers St., Ocean Beach.

The betrothal was announced on small hearts by means of clever place cards made with yellow and green crepe paper to match tally cards.

The house was artistically decorated in spring flowers. All flowers and appointments were carried out in colors of yellow, pink and green, the table being decorated with tall yellow tapers and a centerpiece of genista, centaureas, maiden hair fern, lavender and light pink sweetpeas.

The evening was spent in playing bunco and lotto.

The wedding will take place some time this summer although no definite date has been announced.

Invitations were extended to Misses Martha Perry, Betty Handley, Virginia Taliaferro, Nona Bishop, Kate McCullough, Elizabeth Divine and Bonnie Guernsey, Mesdames Herbert Kaylor, Hugo Erickson, James Northcote, Edmond Smith, David Richards, Frank Kepner, John Stewart jr. Gordon Vaughan, Brownie Stephens, Meryl Pitts, Leslie Harrington, Haines Howell, Richard Wood, Adrian Cooper, Edwin Stivers and Douglas Ford.

Three Store Building Under Construction For A.E. Cahill

Monday morning bright and early construction work started on A. E. Cahill's new three-store building on Bacon street, directly across from the Ocean Beach News office. Foundation walls have been laid and the structure will be ready for occupancy, it is stated, on or before June 15th. The building will be almoss entirely of concrete, both fire proof and earthquake proof. Chas. H. Tifal, builder with the Peterson Lumber & Finance Co., has the contract. He is well known here having put up the corner occupied by the Ocean Beach Bakery a number of years ago and done some residence building for Mr. Cahill and his family, as well as others.

These store buildings are being put up by Mr. Cahill who has owned the real estate for a number of years. Now he finds demand as rentals, with satisfactory leases being made on two of the store rooms, before construction was started.

The store next to the Bank of America with a 22-feet frontage has been leased to Walter Lamb and the other store room on the alley to the north has been leased, leaving a 25-feet room in the center that is still to be rented.

Grill work will effectively set off the front to make a very beautiful structure with red tile roofing. The store rooms are 45-feet deep and there will be a five foot alley back of the building.

Respected Citizen Meets Tragic Death

Fred Hertel, resident of Ocean Beach for years, died instantly Tuesday afternoon, when he leaped from the 12th story window of the San Diego Trust & Savings Bank building.

Mr. Hertel was 68 years of age, and made his home here with his wife Carrie at 1922 Sunset Cliffs Blvd. Besides their home they own the corner occupied by the Sunset Cliffs Service Station on corner of Newport avenue and other property.

He was a native of Illinois and located in National City 22 years ago being elected and served as mayor there 1918 to 1922. He came to this section nine years ago.

Mr. Hertel has suffered a great deal the past two years with a disease believed incurable. After operations and medical attention he apparently lost hope of ever becoming well again, however, he usually appeared in quite good spirits when conversing with his friends. He was of sterling character, as active as his health would permit in civic affairs and most highly respected by his many friends. These friends and the whole of Ocean Beach community extend the sincerest sympathy to Mrs. Hertel and her family in their deep sorrow.

Surviving relatives of the deceased are his widow, Mrs. Carrie Hertel of Ocean Beach; a son Elmer J. Hertel, Oakland; a brother, George Hertel, Chicago; a sister, Mrs. Ellen Eckert, Detroit; and a daughter-in-law, Mrs. Elmer J. Hertel, and two grandchildren, Howard Jay and Donald Bruce Hertel of Oakland.

Funeral services will be at 10 a. m., Benbough funeral parlors, Saturday with Rev. W. S. Dunn officiating. Entombment in Cypress View mausoleum.

FORUM TALK BY PONSFORD POSTPONED ACCOUNT RAIN

Tuesday evening's rain kept local people from turning out to the Open Forum in the school auditorium, at which Arthur Ponsford of the Star & Crescent Boat Co., was to give o descriptive talk on the Tuna Fishing Industry of San Diego. With only a dozen in the audience those in charge decided it would be unfair to Mr. Ponsford to ask him to deliver his talk and then perhaps again come and talk to this same group and an enlarged audience. The speaker stated he would come again at a more favorable time for an audience.

Merkeley's Hillcrest Girls' chorus gave several fine songs which were appreciated by those present. Janet McFarland, one of the chorus, gave a dance number.

Preliminary Plans For Ocean Beach Barbecue

With preliminary arrangements being made to celebrate another big day in Ocean Beach as an old time celebraton and barbecue the Ocean Beach chamber of commerce this week extended an invitation to Los Surenos "The Southerns", asking them to join in the barbecue and help to make the event colorful with old time costumes of the early settlers and in other ways to make the affair an enjoyable event.

Last year the first recent barbecue was held after a month's preparation and it was an entire success, some 5,000 to 6,000 people taking part in the event. Many things were learned in the handling of the crowd and serving of the barbecue, as well as conducting the program, that will tend to assist in better carrying out the whole celebration this year.

If present plans go ahead to a successful conclusion the barbecue will be about noon time, Saturday, June 29th, with a program and sport events to follow during the afternoon.

President Exposition Thanks Newsmen

Monday evening more than one hundred newspapermen and their assistants were guests of the Exposition management at a dinner in the Italian room of the U. S. Grant hotel.

Frank G. Belcher president of the Exposition told the gathering he was grateful for the united support which had been extended the Exposition promotion and that far greater progress had already been made than was dreamed of ten months ago when plans were first being formed.

With a goal set in the beginning for a $500,000 fund, half for building and half for promotion, $700,000 had been raised in record time. Now several million dollars have been spent and with every day greater impetus is being added to Exposition prospects.

"We want citizens of San Diego city and county to look above the trivial misunderstandings and the physical problems that have presented themselves and direct their attention to the many benefits that the Exposition will bring to San Diego," Belcher said. "The magnificent development that has taken place in the short time that we have to prepare for the Exposition has been a miracle. San Diego has something that it can ben proud of, something that the whole nation and the world are recognizing as an unprecedented achievement. To this community they direct their praise for the courage to tackle and carry to a conclusion a task, the equal of which, has never been achieved by any other city of San Diego's size."

An insight into the grandeur of the Exposition was described by O. W. Cotton, Exposition official, who successfully directed the initial campaign for funds that provided the impetus with which the Exposition was started. He directed praise to the press representatives for their part in furthering the "marvelous progress that has been made".

Exposition Chorus of 500 Voices Forming

JOSEPH M. KENDALL
Manager of Choral Activities
AMERICA'S EXPOSITION — 1935

The great Exposition chorus will soon be under way and simultaneous with the appointment of Joseph M. Kendall, well known San Diego musician, as manager of choral activities comes the news of the initial rehearsal and tryout for the Exposition mixed chorus group.

The chorus will be limited to 500 mixed voices. It will be the privilege of San Diego City and county singers to lend color and beauty to the occasion through the medium of choral presentations. This event, America's Exposition-1935, offers ample opportunity for all experienced singers to participate, and this is your formal invitation to do so.

The initial rehearsal will be held at the Lincoln School, 12th and E streets, at 7:30 p. m., Monday, May 6th. Monday night will be the regular rehearsal night thereafter.

If you are a member of a local choir or singing organization, give your name, address, phone number and voice classification to your director, asking to be included on the special list being forwarded to the Exposition department of music. Those not included on these lists must of necessity be given audition or tryout.

The entire chorus is to be composed of enthusiastic singers who wish to avail themselves of the cultural opportunity of serving their community, those who love music, those who desire to participate in our great International Exposition, and those who love the thrill of singing under the baton of nationally famous guest conductors. The privilege of contact with great musicians and nationally known leaders, offers a real personal education feature. Each of you must bring a song with which you are familiar to the initial rehearsal as tryouts have been arranged for at the school the night of the rehearsal for those not on the director's list. If choral directors lists fail to reach the Exposition music office by May 6th, all applicants will be admitted by audition.

Point Loma High To Present "Rosamunde"

Augmenting the Point Loma High school orchestra for the three performances of Schubert's "Rosamunde" on May 16, 17, and 28, orchestra students from San Diego and Herbert Hoover high schools will bring the total orchestra to a group of fifty students accompanying the performance.

A feature of the orchestra rehearsals at present is the recording of several number from the "Rosamunde" score, especially those accompanying the ballets. Since no commercial records of "Rosamunde" orchestra numbers have been made, ballet practise at Point Loma High would necessitate hours of hard work for orchestra players, or a professional pianist, since the piano score presents great difficulties, were it not for this recording feature now in use at Point Loma High school.

Several specialty dances featured by Mrs. Eleanore Dixon and W. Emery Shepherd will add some attractive touches to the "Rosamunde" performance as a whole.

Three iris lens purchased for use in projecting spots will make these dance features of the court scene of "Rosamunde" an effective spectacle. Following an opening ballet by twelve girls and a trio of Pierette, Harlequin and Pierrot by Jane Clark, David Robinson and Bob Merritt there will occur a scimiter dance by twelve boys, chosen for their muscular torsos. Costumed in green Turkish trousers, red sandals, old gold sashes and red boleros over bare torsos, and gold and green turbans, the twelve boys with scimiters flashing in a flickering light, will dance a March Militaire concluded by a bronze plastic by David Robinson and a spirited Berserk by Bryce Santry, Loman high jumper and tumbler

THREE POWERS IN A UNITED FRONT AGAINST GERMANY; BOOM FOR McCARL.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

©, Western Newspaper Union.

SIX of Europe's foremost statesmen, with experts and secretaries, solemnly considered peace plans and security pacts on Isola Bella, a lovely little island in Lake Maggiore off Stresa, Italy. The conference was momentous; but it was of an "exploratory" nature, and no definite results were expected. Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald and Foreign Secretary Sir John Simon, representing Great Britain, were willing to carry out that nation's military obligations under the Locarno treaty but balked at further commitment in continental affairs. Anyhow, they had promised to enter into no new agreements without the consent of parliament, which cannot be consulted until after the Easter holidays. Premier Flandin and Foreign Minister Laval of France sought to persuade England to line up with France and Russia rather than with Germany, and they presented as one argument a new mutual assistance pact they had just signed with Russia. Premier Mussolini, solemn and pessimistic, handled matters for Italy with the help of Fulvio Suvich, undersecretary of foreign affairs. He had already warned the world that the issue of war or peace probably could not be settled at Stresa.

Premier Flandin

Of course, the chief question was the attitude of other nations toward the constantly growing Pan-Germanism of the reich under Hitler, and the first concrete problem taken up was France's appeal to the League of Nations against Germany's repudiation of the military clauses of the Versailles treaty.

Premiers Mussolini and Mac Donald persuaded Flandin to moderate the tone of this protest and not to demand any specific penalty against Germany, and then all approved the note and in a resolution slapped Hitler on the wrist for halting the progress toward arms limitation.

The three premiers also agreed that their nations should act in concert in promoting an Eastern Locarno, strengthening the position of Austria, Hungary and Bulgaria, proceeding with the negotiation of an air convention, opposing unilateral repudiation of treaties, and calling a Danubian conference in May.

France's memorandum as submitted to the League of Nations council when it assembled in Geneva was still a vigorously worded document, characterizing Hitler's military moves as "the culmination of long and methodical labors pursued in secret." The action, it said, "has deliberately destroyed one of the bases" of Germany's collaboration with the league. "By so doing it has seriously compromised the success of international negotiations on limitation of armaments pursued under the auspices of the League of Nations and on the basis of article VIII of the league covenant," the memorandum continued.

Foreign Minister Laval, who presented the memorandum, recommended that Germany be "condemned" for her action, and that the league consider economic penalties against nations which, in the future, violate treaties.

Berlin came back at the memorandum with an official communique which said:

"If France believes it is necessary to recall the obligations forced on Germany one need only to recall France's solemn and voluntary obligations in the Locarno protocol to take immediate steps toward disarmament.

"The statements of the French ministers for years revealed that France never seriously intended to carry out the disarmament obligations."

Actually, the Stresa conference resulted in little more than a demonstration of the continued solidarity of the three great powers participating. This was in a considerable measure a triumph for Mussolini, who had expected nothing more, but had insisted on the united front.

THE new mutual assistance agreement reached by France and Russia was at first supposed to be merely an agreement on sanctions to be taken against an aggressor once the latter has been determined by the League of Nations. But Paris correspondents assert that it is in effect a military alliance such as Russia had been urging on France and that in certain cases the signatories will determine for themselves who is the aggressor without waiting for word from Geneva. The agreement is, of course, directed primarily against Germany.

That Russia still seeks "to maintain and strengthen the general peace" was shown by the signing of a Russo-German trade treaty which it is believed will greatly increase the volume of Russia's orders in the reich.

THERE will be no strike at present in the tire plants of Akron, for the rubber workers in the Goodyear, Goodrich and Firestone factories ratified an agreement that was reached in Washington between labor leaders and officials of the three companies brought together by Secretary of Labor Perkins. The pact provides that the companies will meet with representatives of any group of employees for collective bargaining. It also postpones strike action pending final court tests of orders by the national labor board that Goodyear and Firestone should hold immediate elections for representation in collective bargaining.

JUST as soon as the President says the word, the federal bureau of public roads and the various state highway departments are ready to jump into the work of grade crossing elimination, the building of arterial highways and similar projects. The work relief act earmarks $800,000,000 for such undertakings, and the sum may be increased by the President to a billion. The roads bureau already has $100,000,000 of grade crossing eliminations and other projects contracted for under authority granted by congress last year, officials revealed, and these contracts are to be met with work-relief money.

Arthur W. Brandt, president of the American Association of State Highway Officials, advised a congressional committee recently that states were prepared to wipe out 4,058 dangerous crossings if as much as $461,881,500 was made available. He said $277,567,500 of such projects could be completed in a year. Brandt reported also that state officials were ready to begin construction—or widening and straightening—of 1,739 trunk line routes through cities at a cost of $208,732,800.

States will not be required to match the work-relief money set aside for highway, street and crossing construction. After it is made available by the President, the fund will be apportioned among the states.

JOHN R. McCARL, the able, efficient and independent comptroller general of the United States, has annoyed the New Dealers on several occasions. Now he threatens to block the plans of the AAA for lifting the restrictions on spring wheat planting and at the same time continuing to pay the farmers for crop reductions that would not be called for. Declaring they wished to avoid shortages due to the dust storms, the officials of the AAA said the farmers would be paid for the abandoned reductions in acreage if they would promise to curtail their plantings next year. Mr. McCarl asked for further information on this matter and indicated he could not approve of the plan, though AAA men declared he had not ruled definitely against it. Chester C. Davis, AAA administrator, might not be content to abide by such a ruling if it were made, and the administration might refuse to accept it.

J. R. McCarl

Mr. McCarl, a Republican, holds his office under a law which specifies that the comptroller general shall be appointed to a 15-year term and can be removed only by death or impeachment. Nevertheless Attorney General Cummings, it is understood, gave it as his opinion that, like any other Presidential appointee, he could be removed at the pleasure of the President. He based this opinion on a ruling of the Supreme court in the case of a postmaster who was ousted by President Coolidge, the court holding that the President was within his rights under Article 2 of the Constitution. So it may be the New Dealers will seek to have Mr. McCarl ousted before his term expires in 1936, for it is feared by them that he will hamper the expenditure of the $4,880,000,000 work relief appropriation to an extent that would greatly irk the Democratic party leaders.

It is interesting to read that the Nebraska Progressive league, made up of liberal Republicans, is planning the organization of "McCarl for President" clubs in that state and afterward in all others. George W. Kline, its chairman, says he was asked to support McCarl for President in 1936 by friends of Senator George W. Norris. The comptroller general is a graduate of the University of Nebraska law school and for years was Mr. Norris' secretary.

SEVEN agencies of the government are organizing to combat the damage done by the constantly recurring dust storms. They are the AAA, farm credit administration, emergency relief administration, soil erosion service, bureau of plant industry and bureau of agricultural engineering.

The efforts, officials said, will include shipping feed, food and water into the stricken areas of Texas, Oklahoma, New Mexico, Kansas and Colorado, starting work relief projects on roads, private lands and the public domain, planting of fast-growing and hardy crops as ground cover in areas where moisture conditions permit, and "listing" operations. This latter work is an attempt to prevent soil blowing away, by making alternate ridges and furrows.

Meanwhile other officials of the same bureaus were beginning to map out permanent plans, designed, they said, to prevent recurrence of dust storms in dry periods.

Primary among these was a program with the declared aim of permanently acquiring, through the AAA and relief administration, 15,000,000 acres of land before July 1. Such land will be retired from farm production to cover crops and forests and for use as recreation and wild-life areas. The land is classed as submarginal by government experts since it is in a region of small annual rainfall.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT called Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi to the White House for a conference concerning the veterans' bonus bill, which already has passed the house. Harrison is chairman of the senate finance committee and the administration looked to him to devise a way to spike the measure which is so objectionable to the President in its present "greenback" form. Other majority leaders in congress also were busy with the problem, and it was believed a compromise had been found that would solve it. This would be a bill providing full cash payment by 1938 and, meantime, substitution of interest bearing negotiable bonds for the adjusted service certificates due in 1945.

Pat Harrison

Senator Harrison refused to discuss in detail his conversation with Mr. Roosevelt but expressed hope and confidence that within the next few weeks there would be a settlement of the bonus question satisfactory to all.

ACCUSING the federal government in Washington of maintaining a "dictatorial colonial policy," the legislators of Puerto Rico went on strike, walking out of the capitol at San Juan 36 hours before the session would automatically have ended and leaving unfinished a lot of important legislation. The lawmakers complained especially of methods of carrying on relief and rehabilitation on the island.

ANNOUNCEMENT was made by the government that it had uncovered extensive frauds in the immigration and naturalization service from 1923 to 1933, and steps were taken for the ousting of a number of employees and for criminal prosecutions. It was estimated that a ring of bribe takers and fixers had received as much as a million dollars from persons illegally entering the country.

IN HIS first post-vacation conference with congressional leaders, President Roosevelt disregarded their fears of a prolonged session and insisted on enactment of his legislative program. Especially he wants legislation dealing with extension of the NRA, social security, utilities holding companies, extension of federal authority over banking, ship subsidy readjustment and extension of $416,000,000 in nuisance taxes.

Later the President conferred with Senator Joe Robinson, who said both of them felt that very satisfactory progress is being made. To the correspondent Mr. Roosevelt said he hoped to have the work relief program at its peak by the middle of November, at which time 3,500,000 unemployed should be at work under its terms. He indicated this program would be carried out as far as possible by existing governmental agencies. He will seek to avoid moving workers from one area to another, and will take care of as many "white collar" workers as possible.

The social security bill finally was produced on the floor of the house of representatives. There were several blocs against it in its form as reported. These included representatives who want higher unemployment and old age payments; members from the poorer states, who want the federal government to bear the entire cost of the program, with the states relieved of any contribution, and the conservatives, who are opposed to the "government going into the insurance business" and exacting a pay roll tax during the depression.

SIR OSWALD MOSLEY, chief of the British Fascists, has committed his organization to a policy of anti-semitism fully as severe as that of the Hitler Nazis. At a riotous meeting of his Black Shirts in Leicester, Mosley said: "For the first time I openly and publicly challenge Jewish interests in this country. Commanding commerce, commanding the press, commanding the cinema, dominating the city of London, they are killing industry with their sweatshops. These great interests are not intimidating and will not intimidate the Fascist movement of the modern age."

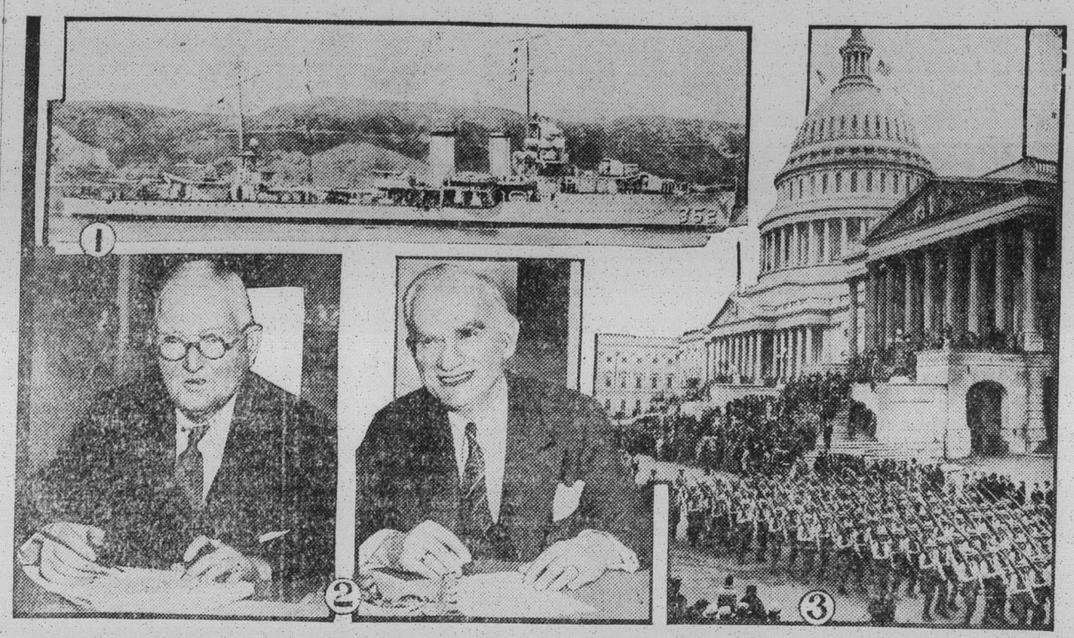

Sir Oswald Mosley

Leaders of more than 200 of Chicago's 300 Jewish organizations assembled to indorse the campaign of the American Jewish congress for consolidation of all organized Jewish action. The chief speaker was the famous Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, national president and founder of the congress. In the course of his address he said:

"I want the day to come when no Jew shall live in Germany—not one. I want the day to come—although I shall not live to see it—when the Jew will be a regretted memory in Germany, just as their presence was a blessing and an ennoblement in every sense."

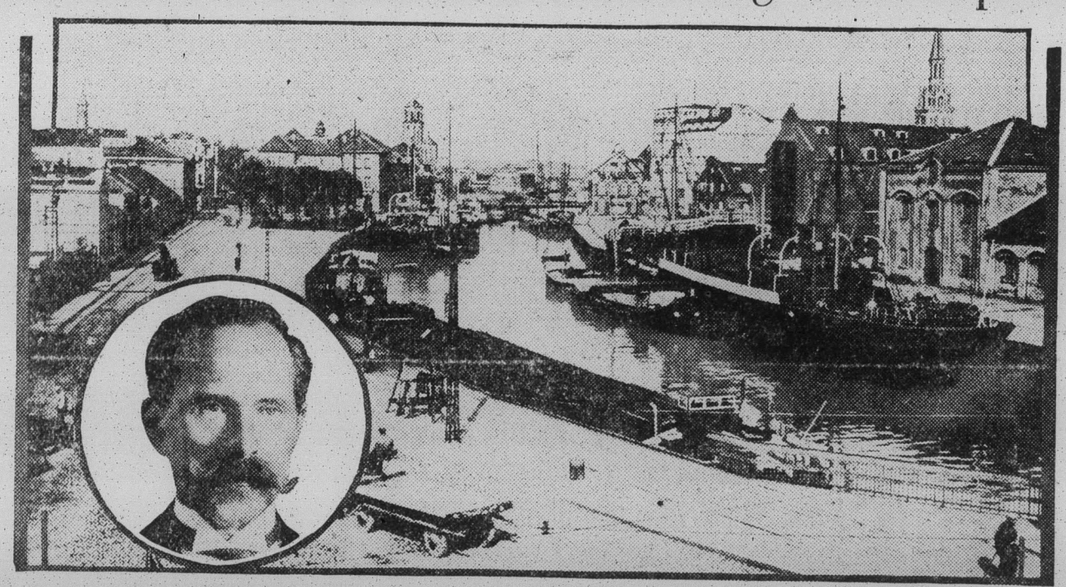

WILEY POST is having nothing but bad luck in his attempts to fly across the continent in the stratosphere in record-breaking time. On his third try, starting from Burbank, Calif., he got as far as Lafayette, Ind., there his supercharger went wrong. So the famous Winnie Mae came down at Purdue university airport eight hours twelve and one-half minutes after it left the west coast. Post was uncertain of his plans for the future.

Pre-Fabricated House of Concrete Panels

AMONG the newest developments in the attempt to transform residential construction into a mass-production industry is a pre-fabricated house of concrete panels, the first example of which has just been completed on Colesville Pike, in the outskirts of Washington, D. C. With 32 panels of concrete, each 2 inches thick, 9 feet high and from 4 to 10 feet wide, John J. Earley has assembled the walls of a five-room bungalow, for which many advantages are claimed in the way of low initial cost, low upkeep cost and permanence. The window casements are cast solidly into the panels in the course of their pre-fabrication in the factory, so that when the walls are assembled and the roof is on the workers may proceed with the interior finish regardless of exterior weather conditions. After the foundation is made, a skeleton of studding, either of wood or steel, is set on it to furnish a frame against which the panels are placed. Light reinforced concrete columns are then cast behind the joints between the panels, which are attached firmly to the columns. The panels of the average house can be put in place in one day, according to the sponsors of the new method.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

SURROUNDED BY ENEMIES

It does no good to just regret
If your mistakes you soon forget.

DANNY MEADOW MOUSE had learned this by hard experience. Now whenever he makes a mistake he wastes no time regretting that mistake, but neither does he forget it. He tucks it away in his memory so that he never will do the same thing again, and then he puts his wits to work to get him out of the trouble his mistake has got him into.

As he peeped out of the hole in the far bank of the Smiling Pool, where he had found safety, he wished with all his might that he had stayed at home. But he wasted little time that way. He hadn't stayed at home, so the thing to do was to try to find a way out of his present difficulties. His home was some distance away on the Green Meadows on the other side of the Smiling Pool. On the other bank he could see Reddy Fox. Down in the Smiling Pool he could see the Big Pickerel, who had so nearly caught him when he was swimming across. There also was Snapper the Snapping Turtle. To make matters worse he caught a glimpse of Billy Mink swimming along closer to the opposite bank. A fat Meadow Mouse for dinner would tickle any of these.

"I Certainly Have Got Myself Into a Heap of Trouble This Time," Thought He.

Then to make matters worse he happened to look up and there sailing round and round high overhead was Redtail the Hawk, and there is nothing in the world that Redtail likes better than Meadow Mouse for his meals. Danny sighed, but he took care that that sigh couldn't be heard more than a few inches away. It was a very gentle sigh, a very gentle sigh indeed, but in it were expressed all Danny's feelings—fear, worry and vain regret.

"I certainly have got myself into a heap of trouble this time," thought he. "I'm surrounded by enemies. Yes, sir, I'm simply surrounded by enemies, and, if I don't watch out there won't be any Danny Meadow Mouse. I had no business to come over here to the Smiling Pool, but here I am. I got myself into this trouble and now I've got to get myself out of it. Nobody else can or will. If a fellow didn't have to eat things would be easier. I could stay right here until I could be sure of a safe trip home. But goodness knows when that time will come and I'm hungry this very minute."

Then as once more he caught a glimpse of Billy Mink a dreadful thought came to him. Billy Mink might take it into his head to come over on that bank of the Smiling Pool and peep into all the holes there, a way he has of doing. "He would surely find me then," thought Danny, "and that would be the end of me. I don't dare go and I don't dare stay. Whatever shall I do?"

MOTHER'S COOK BOOK

SEASONING AND FLAVORING

THE most delightful dish otherwise, may be ruined by the addition of a bit too much or a bit too little of just the right seasoning or flavor. Browning was not using it in this connection, but how well the couplet expresses just the idea of well-seasoned foods:

Oh, the little more and how much it is!
And the little less, and what worlds away!

Success in cookery depends upon the nice taste of the cook in the adding of seasoning, spice or flavoring, without which the food is zestless and flat. Here are a few hints gleaned from various sources which will be suggestive when serving these famili r dishes. A mere trace of nutmeg added to fresh lima beans improves them. A trifle more may be added to the dry ones. Add a small piece of mace to panned or creamed oysters. Remove it before serving. Add both ginger and mustard in Boston baked beans. Ginger for zest, mustard for flavor. The ginger takes the place of pepper.

Drop a small piece of cinnamon in the oatmeal while cooking. Remove this so that no one will discover what makes it taste so good. Add a bit of grater lemon rind to the mush that is to be fried for breakfast.

Grated orange peel or the preserved skin added to ginger bread makes a most delectable flavor; add it to a spiced cake or currant or raisin loaf flavored with lemon extract.

A small bit of sugar, half a teaspoonful or less added to vegetables while cooking will improve the flavor, also it improves soups, roasts are given a more appetizing brown.

A pinch of salt improves almost any food, custards, applesauce, and other stewed fruits. Add a few grains of salt to cocoa, coffee and chocolate for cake filling, to fudge and to icings as well as all forms of candy. When butter is not used more salt will be needed. Adding salt to cooked fruits will save on sugar, for salt brings out sweetness.

Because You Love Me

By ANNE CAMPBELL

BECAUSE you love me, I can bear
The lack of everything I thought
I should possess to make life fair.
The trifling gift that you have brought
Is lovelier in my fond sight
Than jewels sparkling in the light.

The gentle touch of your dear hand,
A tender glance from your warm eyes,
And somehow I can understand
The quality of Paradise.
Just to sit near you is to be
A part of divine harmony.

Because you love me, I can find
A rainbow in the darkest sky.
The troubled days I do not mind
As long as you are standing by.
My smiles will always shine through tears,
If you will love me down the years.

Right to Second Marriage Chance

Arguments For and Against the Severance of the Marital Bond.

The widowers of Brazil have their fingers crossed.

From a question raised recently in their gay capital city, Rio, it would appear to be illegal for widowers to remarry.

Everything was all right until a case before the marriage registrar brought up the point that under the law marriage cannot be dissolved except by annullment. Therefore, said the registrar, if the constitution does not provide for dissolution of marriage ties by death, how can widowers remarry?

The Superior court of Brazil has been appealed to for a decision. The widowers of Brazil will doubtless have a competent advocate to plead their cause, and everything will be all right again. But the situation is interesting for the serious comment it has aroused. It would be a good thing for this country, several people said at once, if we were to emulate Brazil, and make marriage harder to get out of.

"If remarriage were less easy for everybody," they contend, "there would be less separating and divorcing and more successful marriage."

Maybe. One must admit it might help with young couples who are facing their first disillusionment, if that reproach of "What I might have had" could not be followed by "What I can still have!" Doubtless the knowledge of absolute finality in marriage would be conducive to the single-minded effort to make that marriage a success.

But, a woman writer continues, in her comment, what about the cases where a second chance has resulted in bringing happiness, in making up for what was really a mistake which all the effort in the world could not conceal? Though as a rule it is true enough that the most important element for success in marriage is what we ourselves bring to it, there have been cases where a person who could not get along with a first husband or wife did succeed with a second.

For my part, I am glad it is not "up to me" to make the laws affecting in this way the happiness of so many humans who think and feel from different viewpoints. It is not hard to see some benefits in more hard and fast marriage laws. On the other hand, I should not welcome a world which made difficulties for anybody who yearned for a second chance.

Customs and Costumes Take Root in England

"The celebration in London of the centenary of the Old Bailey, the famous criminal court depicted by so many writers and the scene of many of Charles Dickens' delineations, recalls some of the oddities of lawyers' dress in England and the conservatism of the customs," Victor B. Bennett, of the American Express company relates.

"The reason why barristers wear black gowns is that members of the profession went into mourning for Queen Anne. Though Queen Anne is dead, the profession in England keeps on mourning. The English are conservative in the matter of dress. The Knights of the Garter continue to wear short capes and hoods, the same as in medieval days. The clocks on ladies' hose were originally put on to hide the gusset seams when the stockings were of cloth, and have continued as part of hosiery attire ever since."

NOT A BALM—BUT A CURE.

It only takes a little mathematical calculating or elementary arithmetic to reveal an alarming situation, wherein the state is assuming a heavy burden by the constant influx of transients which are being added to the already large relief list. California has always opened her heart to the needs of suffering humanity through poverty and misfortune. She has been too free in many instances.

There is need of some permanent relief not only for California but the nation is feeling the pressure from past years of depression. Tourists all want to go to the Golden State and trust to luck after they get within our borders. This is why stringent orders should be obeyed affecting other states who have seen their people leaving for the Coast.

Hoards of unemployed millions still dwell in idleness, discontent and the dread of despair as they wait for the pendulum of prosperity to swing back again. Congress and relief leaders are endeavoring to settle the matter, but the driving demands upon the public treasury, grow. All the measures proposed for relief will avail little until there are jobs for the idle. The best and only cure for unemployment, everybody knows, is employment itself.

There is no question but that billions will be required to meet the needs of the unemployed, disheartened and needy citizens, and any sum to meet human needs should not be withheld, but there should be a way provided to heal the hurt and not continue to apply the balm. We should have a cure rather than the burden of debt which is just a poultice without any permament help to prevent a spreading national idleness. It may be realized through a pension plan, but no pauper pension will put money in circulation nor will it create more jobs.

When man was first created by the Maker, he not only gave him breath, to keep alive, but food called manna had to be supplied to sustain the body. Vegetation soon furnished him with herbs, barks and leaves, and in that primitive age man put on strength and growth; finally milk and honey valuable food elements. Well this was quite an assortment for a "balanced ration," and he got along very well until he began to crave for a "side dish." Then came meat—the fowls of the air and beasts of the forests. Along came wheat but it was called corn at that time. Now, man had a great choice of diet, and he found every opportunity given for having a full stomach. He must have improved the chance! Every food concoction imaginable ranging from a bowl of bread and milk to a juicy pork steak, is the result. Within the 4000 years time we have made quite remarkable progress in culinary art. Dietetic errors and over-indulgence is claiming victims by the thousands. We little realize, it seems, the value of simple foods and a little practice of self'denial. The simple kernal of wheat is one of Mother Nature's best foods, if eaten according to her directions.

Adventure into unlimited space viewed from Mt. Wilson, through the largest telescope in the world, reveals something of the inconceivable vastness that lays beyond the search of the natural eye. When the mammouth 200-inch mirror to be placed for telescopic purposes in the new Palamar observotory, is completed, billions of miles more will be added to the science of searching into far-away space. It will triple the volume of distance. Light travels with such velocity that is is enough to stagger the genius of human mind. Astronomers talk about 200,000,000 light years as though it was very common, but when a few comparisons are given the mind is lost to grasp the solar facts. One light year is reckoned as the distanee light travels in a year at the rate of 186,000 miles a second, or about 6,000,000,000 miles. This is rapid transit. The new 200-inch telescope will open to astronomers a new field, rolling back the veil of mystery through discoveries of nebulas and larger backgrounds in the Universe.

The old saying, "We have corns on the feet, but prejudice is a corn on the mind." There may be more truth than humor in these stirring words, and it appeals to us all to beware. If prejudice can hurt the mind with the same pain of a corn on the foot—pity that victim! He is in need of the medicine of symathetic persuasion but not unless it effects a cure. The definition of prejudice is not a pleasant meaning for reflection, but most of us are laboring more or less under the complex of prejudice, without knowing it.

President Telephone Co. Says People Fear Future

That fear of dire happenings in the future most of which, based on past experiences never happen, is one of the principal things wrong with America today was the statement of Walter S. Gifford, president of the American Telephone and Telegraph company, Sunday at the celebration of the 50th anniversary of that organization. Mr. Gifford recalled the spirit of enthusiasm and optimism during war times when the American people were "trying to see how the impossible could be and was done" as the type of spirit that assures our country of getting out of its present difficulties. He decried the tendency toward pessimism and fear now predominant.

Coming from the head of the world's largest private organization, this statement carried added weight when it is considered that during the early days of the depression telephone executives were among the few who refused to become ensnarled in the type of optimstic statements so prevalent among business leaders in 1930 and 1931. Mr. Gifford was not one in those days to say that prosperity was "just around the corner" and his current statement to the effect that we should not be fearful of the future is worthy of added recognition on that account.

"The American Telephone and Telegraph company is fifty years old. It has become a great American institution. It is owned by you and your neighbors in every state in the union. It belongs to 'Main Street'. More than half of its nearly 700,000 stockholders are women.

"Its nation-wide organization, existing in substantially the same form for half a century, makes possible telephone service as we know it today. A telephone call is so easy to make that the person making the call has no idea of the complicated physical equipment and the vast organization of workers behind it. Now, it obviously does not just happen that practically anyone, anywhere, any time can talk promptly with anyone else, anywhere in this country—or for that matter almost anywhere in the world. Nor does it just happen that the number of telephones per hundred of population in the United States is more than sixteen times the average of that for the rest of the world and is nearly 50 percent higher than in any country in Europe. It is the result of the free play of individual initiative and ability fostered and given free rein during all these years in an institution which recognizes the American ideal of equal opportunity for each individual to develop to the fullest his talents and personality.

"I want to express my admiration of the great army of telephone workers, over a quarter of a million in number, in all ranks of responsibility who are engaged in operation research, manufacturing and the many other activities necessary for furnishing telephone service to the 125,000,000 people of our country. Those men and women are not only courageous and resourceful in emergencies, they are skillful and thoroly courteous in their day to day activities. They are determined to 'get the message thru'.

"In the Telephone company, our policy and our method of operating are based on the long pull. We are celebrating one 50 years and looking into the next. Practically everyone uses the telephone and most of the money in the business is the life savings of people and most of the work in it is done by people who devote their lives to it.

"We shall continue our efforts to further improve telephone service and make it more economical for the user. We shall continue to try to keep the Bell System an attractive institution for people to work in and safe for investors. Above all, we shall continue to strive to merit the good-will and the esteem of our fellow citizens and to keep the American Telephone and Telegraph company an institution that the American people can be proud of."

Western Building Making Progress

The heartening revival of western building activity in the closing months of 1934 has continued thruout the first quarter of 1935, says Bank of America's business review released last week. Large increases were noted in all areas of the far west, as compared with the same periods of the two previous years, and, according to the bank's survey, are due in a large measure to the National Housing Act. The first quarter building permits in California showed 77.7 percent increase over the first quarter of 1934.

March retail sales showed a decline of 5.5 percent, compared with March of last year, says the review, but the first quarter of 1935 shows an increase of 3.6 percent in volume as compared with the first quarter of last year. Up to April 1, retail stores in Los Angeles reported sales 3.7 percent higher than the corresponding period of 1934. Stores in Long Beach, Pasadena, Riverside, San Bernardino, San Diego, Santa Monica and Santa Ana registered a gain or 6.4 percent in volume of retail sales so far this year, as compared with the same period of last year.

The number employed in manufacturing industries in California in March, 1935, is reported to be 4.2 percent lower than during March of the previous year. By similar comparison, the review points out that pay rolls were 4.1 percent higher in March of this year. In Los Angeles county, employment gained practically one percent and pay rolls increased four percent.

Bank of America's index of prices received by California farmers remained at 91 percent of the July 1910-15 average. This is 18.2 percent higher than March, 1934, and a gain of 59.1 percent over March, 1933, or a gain of 61.1 percent over the all-time low of April, 1933.

ROSSI THANKS SUPPORTERS SAYS MADE ENEMIES TOO

April 30, 1935

To The Editor
Ocean Beach News,
Ocean Beach, Calif.
Dear Sir:—

May I, at this time, be permitted to express through the columns of your newspaper, my sincere appreciation for the support given me in the recent general election by a large number of voters in San Diego.

The confidence of such a large vote after three years of service to the city is something which I prize very highly. I have tried to render impartial service for the best interests of the city and in doing so made many political enemies, for which I am also thankful. I hereby pledge myself now and in the future to stand by and work for the interest of the taxpayers in San Diego and for better government, as I have in the past.

To my friends and neighbors of the Fifth District who gave me such a splendid majority, I extend a speal word of thanks. I wish also to extend my best wishes to the successful candidates.

Dan Rossi.

Parent Teacher Ass'n

MAY MEETING OF PTA ANNOUNCED

Ocean Beach PTA will hold regular meeting, Wednesday, May 8th, in the auditorium of Ocean Beach school, at 2:30 p m. Guest speaker will be Mrs. Jessie Ward, who will speak on the school of the future. Mrs. R. V. Williams, recreation chairman of 9th district, will present some of her dance pupils who will give several dances accompanied by Mrs. Williams at the piano. A social time will follow the regular meeting. Refreshments will be served and all parents and friends of Ocean Beach school children are invited and expected.

At this time when San Diego is being favored by a state convention, to be held the last week in May, much information will be given out at Wednesday's meeting, pertaining to same. You who desire to hear nationally known child educators talk on your child and his problems, will gather much from attending our own convention. Your May Courier will publish a program for the entire conventon, to whom San Diego parents are privileged to be hosts.

Since it has ceased to be a strictly student dance for the young people of High School age, the Ocean Beach PTA board wishes to state that we have withdrawn our sponsorship for the dances held on Friday night under the supervision of SERA. This action in no way reflects upon the activities of any student who has been attending the dances.

To the mothers who are interested in sewing, and anyone who would like to learn more about home dressmaking, Mrs. R. V. Williams wishes to say that as this work is being done under SERA, still the Ocean Beach PTA sanctions and sponsors this work, and heartily approves of the classes. You are welcome to start in at any time, and your special needs will be given personal attention. Classes meet 10 a. m. to 3 p. m. Wednesdays, in the school bungolow. Mothers may bring a sandwich, coffee may be had in the cafeteria, or luncheon may be secured in the, cafeteria during the noon hour.

Mrs. R. V. Williams, dancing instructor at the school bungalow, places this invitation to mothers in Ocean Beach and vicinity, to come and attend Thursday afternoon 3:15 p. m. dancing classes. Many boys who are earnestly trying to learn ballroom dancing need the cooperation of calm and careful partners who have their welfare at heart. This hour is under the sponsorship of the PTA and receives hearty approval of the local Ocean Beach unit.

Board members of the Ocean Beach PTA gave a luncheon for the teachers of Ocean Beach school, Wednesday, 12:30 in the auditorium. Fifteen tables were decorated with cecil brunner roses, fern and clarkia. Mrs. Y. N. Adams designed original place cards for the teachers, and for special guests, including Richmond Barbour, principal, Mrs. R. R. Lewis, of La Jolla, Mrs. R V. Williams, recreation chairman of 9th district, Mrs. Violet Bell and Miss Ina Neal, school nurses and Miss Benita LeClerg, secretary.

The lively assistance of the room mothers in charge was joyfully accepted. Those assisting were: Mrs. Charles F. McManus, Mrs. Alfred Reeves, Mrs Guy Z. Plummer, Mrs. Phoebe Drinkwater, Mrs. Jack E. McCaffrey, Mrs. Wm. C. Madigan, and Mrs. Glen M. Jones. Young girls who gleefully assisted, were: Florence McCausland, Elizabeth Long, Joan Soper and Elizabeth Wisdom.

Richmond Barbour, principal, speaking in behalf of himself and the teachers, acclaimed the hour a very "satisfactory one" from the standpoint of menu, and in such a delightful setting, with the PTA officiating, regarded the occasion one of particular importance, due to the fact that our Ocean Beach PTA is a standard unit, and an especially active one.

"Ocean Beach," says Mrs. Don Horner, sr., past president, "Is regarded by 9th district as a recognized organization and one that can be relied upon."

CHURCHES OF CHRIST, SCIENTIST

"Everlasting Punishment" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon on Sunday in all branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass.

One of the Bible selections in the Lesson-Sermon includes the verses from Matthew: "And, behold, they brought to him a man sick of the palsy, lying on a bed: and Jesus seeing their faith said unto the sick of the palsy; Son, be of good cheer; thy sins be forgiven thee. And behold, certain of the scribes said within themselves, This man blasphemeth. And Jesus knowing their thoughts said, Wherefore think ye evil in your hearts? For whether is easier, to say, Thy sins be forgiven thee; or to say, Arise, and walk? But that ye may know that the Son of man hath power on earth to forgive sins, (then saith he to the sick of the palsy,) Arise, take up thy bed, and go unto thine house. And he arose, and departed to his house."

The Lesson-Sermon presents also these passages from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Jesus healed sickness and sin by one and the same metaphysical process." "Both cures require the same method and are inseparable in Truth."

Lutheran Mission

"Jesus Christ, the Good Shepherd" will be the subject of the sermon at the 10:45 o'clock service.

The Sunday school lesson treated in all departments will be "The Prodigal Son". This is indeed a timely lesson for such periods in which we are living. Send your child, so that he might learn not to follow the footsteps of this Prodigal Son, as many do today.

You are most cordially invited to attend these services, which are held at the Woman's club house, Newport and Abbott streets.

All applicants must be at least 66 inches in height, have attained the age of 18 years, be unmarried, and otherwise physically fit. All enlistments are for a period of four years and men who are accepted will be given their recruit training at the local Marine Base. The local office prefers to obtain its quota for that station from local men who reside in the near vicinity of San Diego as it is believed that these men should have the first opportunity to avail themselves of the travel, education and character building that an enlistment in the Marine Corps will provide.

The Mission Bay Bill

(San Diego Sun)

The Mission Bay area should be improved and developed and The Sun is whole-heartedly for such a program.

But we are very definitely opposed to the bill now before the Legislature, sponsored by Assemblyman Wallace, which would take that area out of the hands of the State Park Commission and throw it completely under the control of a local five-man commission vested with absolute and extraordinary powers.

If no other objection were valid, the single provision which gives the appointive commission the power to erect buildings and spend money without advertising for bids or being beholden to anyone would be sufficient to condemn the measure in our eyes.

But there are other obviously valid objections.

Mission Bay park is a highly complicated project. The boundaries are indeterminate and involved in litigation. Certain property holders are extremely interested in land development in the area for reasons which have nothing to do with the better interests of the city as a whole.

"All of the powers duties, purposes responsibilities and jurisdiction of the Director of Natural Resources, the State Park Commission and the Board of State Harbor Commissioners for the Bay of San Diego and all other state officers or agenies with respect to the administration of the bay and harbor of Mission Bay concerning any property of the state referred to x x x x are transferred to and vested in the State Board of Regional Harbor Commissioners for Mission Bay."

That, in our judgement is placing far too much power in the hands of a commission which undoubtedly will be appointed for political reasons.

The state has mapped out an extensive and necessary flood control plan which will change some of the contour of the Mission Bay area. What will happen when that program runs up against an arbitrary commission, handling public property in a private way?

The Sun believes that Assemblyman Wallace owes the people of San Diego an explanation of his reasons for promulgating such a unique piece of legislation and we shall await with interest any explanation he cares to make.

TROOP 29 SCOUTS MAKING GOOD PROGRESS

Boy Scout troop 29 of the Baptist church, a veteran troop now completing its fifteenth year of scout activity is jubilant over the high rating gained during the 1935 camporee of the San Diego area council, held at the Indian Village, April 26-27. The troop was represented in the camporee by the Moose patrol composed of the following scouts, patrol leader Stanley Cobb; A.P.L. James Keck, Howard Littlefield, Jack Watson, Vernon Smith, Charles Davis, David Cobb and Leland Oberholser. Eighteen troops participated in the camporee and troop 29 gained an "A" rating with 972 points out of a possible one thousand. Bob Diamond, Humphrey Van Gessel, Billy Linthicum and Albert Robinson were responsible for the chemistry badge in the merit badge exposition, held on the same date in the Indian Village. This was a fine piece of work and Scoutmaster Walter Dunn is to be congratulated for the progress of the troop.

For thirty three consecutive months the troop has gained the 100 percent award for efficiency. This makes the troop one of the highest rated in San Diego county.

WARREN WALKER SCHOOL

Mrs. Walker, director of the Warren-Walker school, spent the week end in Brawley where she attended teacher's institute. Vierling Kersey, state superintendent of education gave the main address. Mrs. Clifford Allen, daughter of Mrs. Walker, directed a boys octet and a mixed chorus in singing several numbers.

Miss Price, a teacher ot the Warren-Walker school has been taking Jean Blake, Joycelyn Watters, Beverly Parks and Patricia Welch to swim at the Y. W. C. A, Miss Price, who is on excellent swimmer has been helping the girls improve their strokes. The girls always look forward to Friday afternoon.

A nature study walk was taken along Sunset Cliffs by the students of the upper grades last Thursday afternoon. Among other things were seen sea anenomes, crabs, barnacles, muscles, seaweed and moss. Particular notice was given the formation of the rocks. Due to the constant pounding of the waves, the sandstone rocks are gradually wearing away and lately the cliffs have been caving in.

Marjory Stewart has returned to school after a two weks visit in Los Angeles with her parents.

A GOOD FATHER

Matthew 7. 7-12

7. Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you: 8. For every one that asketh receiveth; and he that seeketh findeth; and to him that knocketh it shall be opened. 9. Or what man is there of you, whom if his son ask bread, will he give him a stone? 10. Or if he ask a fish, will he give him a serpent? 11. If ye then, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children, how much more shall your Father which is in heaven give good things to them that ask him? 12. Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them; for this is the law and the prophets.

IDEAL FROCK FOR AFTERNOON WEAR

PATTERN 9206

Something different in the way of smartness is this youthful afternoon dress. Its yoke, round in front and buttoning into a chic triangle at the back, points the way to shoulder width, which every style-conscious woman knows is most important this season. The smart bodice is tucked at the yoke-line for flattering fullness. Then, too, the skirt—coming to a nice point above the waistline, back and front—boasts a slimming back seam and kickpleat for extra "back interest." This design would be particularly lovely in metal flecked crepe, either silk or wool. Short sleeves are included with the pattern.

Pattern 9206 may be ordered only in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Size 16 requires 3 yards 39 inch fabric.

SEND FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, STYLE NUMBER and SIZE.

Complete, diagrammed Sew Chart Included.

—15—

"When a man loves a girl, that girl can't let herself love him, can she, when she's under a cloud herself? She can't bring a man's children into the world and have them whispered about as the grandchildren of a murderer?"

"Dawn! Dawn, girl, don't think that! Why, it's—"

"But it's so, Able! I don't wa-want to talk about it. All I can do for Ben now is to let him know how weak I was to doubt him and to use any influence I may have to protect him from this terrible danger. I will do that; I must do that because it is duty. But it must stop there. It can't go on, you see. Not while I have nothing more than just my faith in my father's good name."

Able, the wise man that he was, did not force the argument. He brought his team to a halt before the Hoot Owl office, gave the reins to Dawn and stepped out.

Martin, the bookkeeper, was the only occupant of the place.

"Where's Ben?" he asked.

The bearded man looked over his shoulder, recognized Able and then his gaze went past the man to the waiting cutter where Dawn sat.

"He's . . ." It seemed as though Martin's voice failed after that word. He half started from his chair and the pen, dropped from flexed fingers, rolled across the ledger sheet. He made a faint sound and in his eyes appeared an expression that startled Able.

"What's wrong, Martin?" he asked in alarm, stepping quickly into the room. "Sick?"

"No . . . all right now," the other said, as if with great effort. "Ben? In the mill, I think."

He picked up his pen, then, and bent over his work.

Able crossed the mill-yard looking for Ben and as he went Martin rose cautiously from his chair, moved quietly to be in line with the window and stared for a long interval at the girl huddled in the robes. His hands worked and his breath was uneven.

"Dawn is here to see you," Able said simply as he encountered Ben. "She had me bring her out so she could talk to you. She's waiting over by the office."

Elliott stood hesitant for an instant; then turned and walked swiftly along the pond. Able watched him go but did not follow. What was to be said by the girl was not for his ears, he knew.

Ben gave no sign of recognition as he approached the cutter; made no salutation as he came near the girl who sat watching him so steadily. He only spoke her name, when he was at her side. She gave him a small, gloved hand and smiled wanly.

"I have come to say many things, Ben," she began in a strange, strained voice. "To beg forgiveness, to beg other things . . . perhaps to explain a little.

"A week ago tonight,"—struggling, now, to hold her voice steady—"I ran out of the dance hall and on home, thinking that that woman was honest. The time since then, until noon today, has been a nightmare.

"Lydia came to my house at noon. She explained everything. Aunt Em brought her. Aunt Em went to her house and convinced her that she had done a terrible thing to you and that an explanation to me was the only way to right the wrong. Lydia told me everything. . . . It was Mr. Brandon who thought out the plan and forced her to do it under threats of some sort. She didn't tell us what the threats were but left our house for the train and is gone from Tincup forever. . . . And I've come to tell you how miserable I feel to think that I was weak enough to act as Mr. Brandon seemed to be sure I would act. . . ."

Relief was singing through Elliott; relief and a great joy, lifting him above rage for Brandon.

"Oh, I'm glad!" he said earnestly. "I've . . . Why, it completely knocked me off my pins! Dawn, it's been terrible for you but . . . but this makes me so happy!"

"I'm happy because you are happy," she said, but something in her tone and expression dampened his enthusiasm, checked his soaring spirits. She was so calm, so steady, so restrained; her mood was not at all that of one who comes joyously to wipe out heartbreaking misunderstanding. "And I'll never forgive myself for . . . for falling into the trap that was set for me, Ben!"

"Why shouldn't you? Any girl would have felt as you did. . . . But it's explained, now. Let's forget it and begin where we left off and find peace and—"

The sharp shake of her head and the quick withdrawal of her hand cut him off.

"There are sterner things to think of, first; quite different things, Ben. That is why I came out here, to talk to you about Bart Delaney. Able has told me what happened yesterday. You don't take it seriously enough. Keep safe until you're certain that the danger is past."

"Hide and skulk while other men protect me? A man can't do that, Dawn! I'll be on my guard, of course. But I can't run away from anybody who is trying to strike from behind. What would these boys here on the job think of me if I did? This man Delaney may be a hobgoblin for the rest of the country, but I can't let him be for me. If I do the safe thing and think of my own skin, some of our workers will tumble to the fact that I've no more courage than most of them, less than plenty. I can't let them down you see, and still keep my standing in their eyes.

"It isn't worth it, Ben! It's my job, my property you're taking these risks for. It isn't fair to me!"

"I can argue that. I'm not anxious to be put out of the picture yet a while. I'll keep my eyes open. I've already made the move that should stop Delaney from trying me again. Able and the others have gotten you all in a flutter, Dawn. Don't worry. I'm coming to Tincup tonight and I'm going to appear to be thinking about nothing but the errands I have to do. Every second, I'll be on the watch for a crooked move from anybody. I promise you that. And when I've shown myself to people I'll come to see you and talk you into the same way of looking at this situation."

"Don't," she begged.

"But I can't keep away from you, now that this other mess has been explained!"

She shook her head.

"I'm asking two things of you. The first is to stay here; the other is not to come to see me. . . . Please!"

She put a hand on his with that plea, and he frowned.

"I can understand your being a little timid about having me around town but I can convince you that I'm right. It's Brandon or me, now, you see. If I run, he wins. . . . But this offer: Dawn, don't you want me to see you?"

The girl's lips worked.

"No," she said, ever so faintly. "No, . . . Oh, please don't argue with me, Ben! Please don't come to see me. You don't understand. You may never understand. . . . But I'm begging you from the bottom of my heart not to come and see me again!"

"No, I don't understand. It's . . . Why, it's . . ." He laughed aloud at his own bewilderment and Able, in the near distance, mistook that laugh born of distress for one of relief and came toward them.

"Well, have you two got matters cleared up?" he asked.

Dawn nodded silently.

"Some things are cleared up," Elliott said. "But there are others. . . . Dawn, won't you explain?"

The girl turned her face to Able.

"I'm ready to go home now," she said weakly.

CHAPTER XII

Teams drove from the Hoot Owl toward town through the falling snow that evening. First went Ben Elliott, alone and sending his drivers at a spanking trot, wondering and at odds with himself.

Why was Dawn so obdurate in this matter of having him see her? Why that odd repression, as though she struggled to keep from saying the things that were bursting her heart?

His inability to answer those questions drove him into a dogged mood. He felt like blaming Brandon for this, as well as other troubles.

A half hour behind him came a team from camp, driven by Bird-Eye Blaine. A figure ahead stepped out of the ruts and awaited his approach.

"Town?" the man cried.

"Yup. . . . Hello, Martin! Whoa. . . ."

Blaine lifted the heavy robes for the bookkeeper and then clucked his team on.

"Misther Elliott gone in?" he asked. "He has, eh? . . . 'Nd Misther Red Bart Delaney still persecutin' th' country with his presince, loikely. Ah, th' b'y, th' b'y!"

Martin proved to be uncommunicative, however, and they drove much of the way in silence.

Ben turned his team into an alley, hitched and blanketed them, and then made his way between buildings to the town's principal thoroughfare which was lighted by glaring store fronts. He purchased some articles in a clothing store and did not see Dawn McManus enter, observe him, and then withdraw. When he went out again he did not notice that the girl followed him, waited outside while he bargained for a month's supply for camp in a butcher shop, and trailed along behind when he emerged.

From place to place he went, Dawn behind him in the flying snow and when she had been following so for half an hour, her eyes alert for others who might be watching Elliott, another fell into the train ahead of her. She saw this man step from a store entrance and follow Ben. She hastened to be close and not until she was abreast of him did she recognize John Martin, whom she had seen but once before. He did not turn his head and she dropped back. She had no doubts of his loyalty from what Ben had told her of his bookkeeper.

When Elliott went into the drug store she stood out of the light from the building and noted that also Martin loitered near. When Ben reappeared, Martin followed. . . .

For the better part of an hour this double stalking continued while the snow fell thicker and then Elliott turned into a side street and made the next turn into the alley where he had left his team.

Two figures followed him, hastening a bit as he disappeared into the gloom. Martin followed Ben, as Dawn trailed both.

And then, as Elliott drew close and spoke gruffly to his horses, another shadowy figure appeared: it was only a blur in the shadows, crouched and stealthy. The figure swept forward; an arm drew back and upward; it struck and with a muffled grunt Ben Elliott turned, falling sideways and backward under the impact of a blow.

Another voice lifted then in a sharp cry as John Martin ran forward and the indistinct figure which was poised over Elliott, about to strike again, turned, hesitated, whirled and fled.

"What is it, son?" Martin cried as he dropped to his knees beside Ben. Before a reply could come Dawn was there, moaning his name over and over.

"Knife!" Ben gasped. "In the neck . . . here . . ."

John Martin unbuttoned Elliott's thick jacket, ripped open the shirt and his fingers encountered a warm, sticky gush as he thrust them across the back.

"Knifed you! . . . Ah, son!"

Dawn peered close into the bearded man's face as though fearful of what he might say next.

"We've got to get him somewhere right away," Martin muttered. "Got to. . . . It's bad."

"My house is just around the corner!" she cried. "Bring him there. Oh, hurry!"

Together they lifted Ben to his feet. His teeth ground shut to keep back the moans. He was sick and weak with pain. He could feel blood smearing over his side and back. He sagged against Martin as the man supported him.

"Hurry!" she said. "He's so weak!"

He was weak, indeed. With their arms about his body for support, they moved through the snow. Elliott felt Dawn close to him and closed his eyes almost happily. He struggled to help himself so he would not burden her, but he stumbled and nearly fell and another gush of blood bathed his body. After ages of effort and pain a glare seemed to be all about, warm breath fanned his face . . . and Aunt Em, standing in the doorway, was saying sharply:

"In here. . . . Your room, Dawn. I'll phone the doctor."

Emory Sweet worked rapidly, once there. "Deep!" he muttered. "Gad, what a blow. Missed the jugular by a hair."

The wound was only a slender slit in the skin but the blade had been driven deep, indeed, and the blood that flowed from it had drawn the bronze from Elliott's face, the strength from the splendid muscles that lay relaxed now beneath clear skin.

"Now!" said the physician when Ben finally lay back on Dawn's pillow, breathing shallowly, eyes closed. "I guess he'll be all right in a few days. . . . But what an escape!" He shrugged.

Sweet looked at John Martin, then. The doctor's brows drew a bit, he seemed to lean forward and blinked slowly, incredulously. Then Martin moved and the other relaxed. Still, his expression was one of startled speculation.

"Yes, a close shave," Martin muttered under his breath. "But now . . . He's in the best possible place in the world."

The doctor began gathering his instruments. Martin stood staring at Ben in deep thought. Then his right hand went to the lobe of his left ear and tugged slowly in that characteristic gesture. He did not observe Emma Coburn standing in the doorway. He did not look at her until the woman gasped. It was a light, light gasp; so light that Emory Sweet did not hear. But Martin heard and turned and stood as though frozen in the posture. Aunt Em's head was held rigidly back, one hand pressed against a cheek.

"Knife!" Ben Gasped.

Quickly, Martin's finger went against his lips in a sealing gesture. He held so an instant and then slowly shook his head, a movement of unmistakable warning.

Dawn entered the hallway from the living room and these two relaxed from the rigidity of their strange pantomime. Em bustled out into the kitchen and Martin smoothed the covers of Elliott's bed with a hand that trembled slightly.

"Now, the boy's going to be all right," the doctor said. "I'll look in tomorrow. Quiet is going to be essential for a few days. You two women all right?"

A close observer might have noticed that Aunt Em's eyes were oddly averted from John Martin's searching gaze and that her breathing was quick.

"Why, it might be handy to have a man in the house tonight," she said, evenly enough. "I'm . . . I'm wondering if Mr Martin would stay. He could sleep on the couch in the living room."

"I'd be glad to," the man said and cleared his throat sharply. "There might be something I could do . . . for you."

He had looked at Dawn on this last and it seemed that his voice caught ever so slightly.

So it was arranged that he should stay through the night and the doctor left.

Aunt Em carried the light out of the sick room and placed it on a table in the hall. She bustled here and there, occupied with a variety of minor errands and finally drove Dawn to bed despite the girl's protests of sleeplessness.

Alone, she fixed blankets on the living room couch while Martin sat in the darkened bedroom. That done, she beckoned to him from the hallway.

They confronted one another there a long moment. The woman's face worked queerly and she seemed at a loss for words.

SYNOPSIS

Ben Elliott—from "Yonder"—arrives at the lumbering town of Tincup, with Don Stuart, old, very sick man, whom he has befriended. Nicholas Brandon, the town's leading citizen, resents Stuart's presence, trying to force him to leave, and Elliott, resenting the act, knocks him down. Judge Able Armitage hires him to run the one lumber camp, the Hoot Owl, that Brandon has not been able to grab. This belongs to Dawn McManus, whose father has disappeared with a murder charge hanging over his head. Brandon sends Duval to beat up Ben, and Ben throws him out of camp. Don Stuart dies, leaving a letter for Elliott "to be used when the going becomes too tough." Ben refuses to open the letter, believing he can win the fight by his own efforts. Fire breaks out in the mill. Ben, when the flames are subdued, discovers it was started with gasoline. Elliott gets an offer for logs, that will provide money to tide him over. But a definite time is set. Ben discovers Dawn McManus is not a child, as he had supposed, but a beautiful young woman. The railroad bridge over which the Hoot Owl lumber must pass is blown up. By superhuman efforts Ben builds a new bridge and himself drives the train over the rickety structure to Tincup, making the delivery with only a few minutes to spare. Brandon compels a woman (known as "Lydia") who is in his power, to accuse Elliott of misconduct with a girl. At a dance to which Elliott escorts Dawn, Lydia makes public her charges. Overwhelmed, Elliott can only make a feeble denial. Dawn, apparently believing him guilty, leaves the dance without waiting for him. While in the woods, Elliott is fired on, and drops, seemingly dead, but his fall has been a ruse to make his enemy believe him dead. The would-be killer is proved to be Red Bart Delaney, notorious desperado. "Aunt Emma," Dawn's closest friend, prevails on the woman Lydia to acknowledge the falsity of her accusation.

Once England's Nazareth

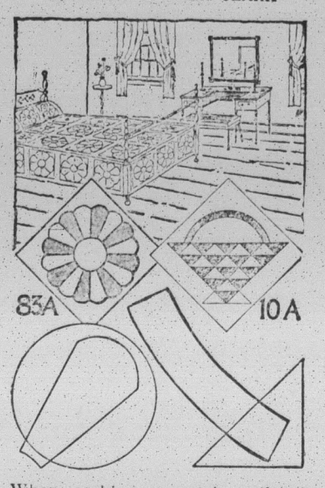

The Shrine of Our Lady at Walsingham, England, is where Henry VIII walked barefoot as a pilgrim. In a few years, the ruler destroyed the Priory, confiscated the lands and treasuries, burnt the shrine and executed five of the Priory canons for treason. Another shrine was built in the Slipper chapel, so named because in ancient days pilgrims removed their shoes when visiting it. Walsingham once was England's Nazareth which brought it immense fame. It was founded about 1061. Like Lourdes, it had its holy wells, and became famous for the many miracles which were believed to have been wrought there.

The Baby's Faculties

The ages when certain faculties first appear in average infants and children vary considerably. Memory and simple consciousness come soon after birth, curiosity at about ten weeks, the senses of shame, remorse and the ludicrous at fifteen months, self-consciousness at three years, the color sense at four years and the sense of fragrance at five years.—Collier's Weekly.

CUTTING PATCHES FOR QUILTS

By GRANDMOTHER CLARK

When, making a patch quilt the patches must be cut out right if the finished quilt is to look neat. Sewing seams the same width is also very important. These two points should always be watched as work progresses, to obtain good results, and not have trouble after work is well under way. Cut the patches from accurate cut-out diagrams. The cut-out diagrams shown here are a set for the "Dresden Plate" and "Basket" quilts, and include allowance for seams. Any width for seams may be used but always use the same width in one quilt, to come out right. Directions for use are very simple. Place cut-out on material so the longest dimension follows the weave. Mark outline with pencil and cut out material carefully.

Send 10 cents to our quilt dept. and we mail you both of these fiber cut-outs set No. 83a and 10a.

"IN THE SWEET BYE AND BYE"

Fine Old Song Had Origin in Fit of Gloom.

The song, "In the Sweet Bye and Bye" grew out of one of the composer's frequent fits of gloom, according to Hezekiah Butterworth in his "Story of the Hymns and Tunes."

Joseph Philbrick Webster, who wrote the song, entered the office of Dr. Sanford Filmore Bennett in Elkhorn, Wis., in the year 1867, wearing a melancholy look, and was rallied good naturedly by the doctor for being so blue—the two were friends and the doctor was familiar with the other's frequent periods of melancholia.

Webster and Bennett had been working in a sort of partnership, Webster being a musician and Bennett a ready verse-writer, and together they had created and published a number of sheet music songs. When Webster was in a fit of melancholy it was the doctor's habit to give him a "dose" of new verses and cure him by putting him to work.

"What's the matter now?" was the doctor's greeting when his "patient" came with the tell-tale face.

"Oh, nothing," said Webster. "It'll be all right by and by."

"Why not make a song of the sweet by and by?" rejoined the doctor, cheerfully.

"I don't know," said Webster, after thinking a second or two. "If you'll make the words, I'll write the music." And so the song was born and entered in the Sunday School hymn book, "The Signet Ring," which Bennett and Webster were at work upon.

It had no exceptional result as to its hold on the public until 1873 when Ira D. Sankey took it up as one of his working hymns. That year it appeared, with pianoforte accompaniment and chorus in "Winnowed Hymns," as arranged by Hubert P. Main.

Doctor Bennett was born in 1836, and went to Elkhorn from the West in 1861 to practice his profession. He died in October, 1898. Webster was born in Manchester, N. H., March 22, 1819. He was active as a member of the Handel and Haydn society and various other musical associations. He moved to Elkhorn, Wis., in 1857, where he died January 18, 1875. His "Signet Ring" was published in 1868. —Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Local Real Estate High 22 Years Ago

Perhaps you will be interested in more old time news about people and conditions in Ocean Beach.

In "The Rising Tide" a paper published here in September, 1913, we find a lot of material showing a live beach community with real estate values at their highest since this section was platted. C. M. De Venelle was the editor.

In the fall of 1913 Ocean Beach "the Coney Island of the Pacific" was striving earnestly to have its street car fares reduced to a par with east San Diego. The fare then as now was 25c for the round trip.

Rev. W. F. Waterman was pastor of the Ocean Beach Union Church "The Tent Church" located on Santa Monica between Cable and Defoe streets.

H. G. Phillips was rescued from the surf in a drowning condition.

Captain Thomas, oldest inhabitant of the beach, died September 2, at age of 94 years. He came to Ocean Beach in 1887.

Wonder land, the amusement ground built by the Ocean Bay Beach Co., real estate promoters, was just opened and enjoying a good patronage, the paper states that 25,000 representatives of the Federated Labor and Trades spent a day there.

Among the advertisers still in business or well known to our present readers were Davenport's Grocery, 4722 Niagara avenue; H. A. Anderson, proprietor Ocean Beach Bakery; Edwin Chew, jobbing and teaming; G. E. Smith grocery, 4719 Newport avenue; William H. Carlson, real estate; W. A. Thomas, bungalow builder; W. W. Wagner and E. B. Moore, cleaning and pressing, 4683 Newport avenue; Thomas Mercantile Co.; Ocean Beach Lumber Co., O. A. Bates, Mgr.; Mrs. Reid's Delicatessen, corner Newport and Bacon street; Ocean Bay Beach Co., H. C. Snow, general manager; H. H. Reed and L. G. Ells were owners of the Ocean Beach Plumbing Co.; Chas. S. Brummett, painting; The Breakers Cafe, John P. Neth, proprietor; Kenney's Bath House; Charles L. Colby's drug store near the bluff on Niagara avenue; C. A. Peace and M. H. Van Fossen operating the Newport Garage; G. M. Porter, builders' hardware.

Real estate at Ocean Beach hit about its highest mark during this time with 100x140 on Newport hill priced at $1600. Business lots were higher, nearer the ocean Skelly & Wenrich advertised a 29 ft. lot on Abbott at $4,200, 34 ft. with cottage $6,000, 70 ft. corner on Abbott at $12,000, 50 ft corner at $7,500, another at $6,500, 40 ft. inside lot $8,000; other realtors say swell corner 4 lots Narragansett avenue $3,900, 2 lots on Cape May at $2,000, 2 lots on Voltaire near Bacon $2,500.

1913, that was 22 years ago, Ocean Beach was strictly a beach resort. One tent church for the whole community, now 1935, eight or more denominatons well represented here, six with their own church buildings.

One of our Ocean Beach News readers a short time ago said, "if Ocean Beach makes as much progress in the next ten years as it has in the last ten, don't you think it will be a delightful place to live? From a dance and drink, hinky-dink amusement place, to a well regulated residential suburb of careful planning is progress. Our civic centre about the school and library should be an objective of the future. We are fortunate in not being overbillboarded. There are only two bill boards in the whole comunity. Let's keep it to that, for they do not help the appearance of any place. And many property owners do not keep their own houses painted up nor their lots cleaned off. A dollars worth of paint and a half day's work would change the appearance of some of the unkept places here. Fifteen minutes a day and a little water would keep lawns green."

Press Club Dance Tuesday, May 7th

Something new in the way of entertainment is offered by the San Diego Press club in its announcement that the next event on the Club's Exposition year program will be the inaugural dance, honoring the new city administration, at the Mission Beach ballroom Tuesday night, May 7.

This affair, it is emphasized, will be strictly informal with everyone invited to meet the men who will direct the city's affairs during the next few years. These officials are Mayor Percy J. Benbough, Councilmen Al W. Bennett and Harry Warburton, and Councilmen-elect Raymond M. Wansley, Walter C. Wurfel, Bruce Stannard and John S. Siebert.

In addition to these city officials, all city department heads, all county officials, all city and county employees, officials of county communities, leaders of various civic and and other organizations, and representatives of Governor Merriam will attend.

The purpose of the dance, Press Club officials say, is to bring all citizens together in a civic demonstration of good will toward the new city administration and to emphasize further the "exposition spirit" that has united the entire city and county. Proceeds of the dance will go into the club's hospitality fund for the entertainment of newspaper and publicity men and women who are coming from all parts of the country, and some foreign countries, to "cover" the Exposition.
